Robson • Savage

IN A HEARTBEAT

By Terry Owen

Robson Savage, retirement fund administrators, has as its tagline “For Your Benefit” and, aside from the obvious correlation to its business, it’s a great way of saying “it’s all about you,” and for this company at least, it not a cliché, it’s a direct statement of fact.

There are numerous testimonials that will attest to the company’s ingenuity, honesty, responsibility, and downright resourcefulness. If it were not so, I would not be writing this. My code of ethics is de rigueur in all I write or do. So, I write this with great depth and passion. I proclaim the virtue of Robson Savage from the rooftops with ease of conscience.

The company was born in 2000 and has since gone on to scoop many awards, among them several Imbasa Yegolide Awards from the Batseta Council of Retirement Funds for South Africa, garnering the Accolade for Professional Excellence. The company was previous winners of Employee Benefit Consultant Of The Year and Employee Benefit Administrator Of The Year. It was nominated in five categories in the current award cycle.

It also scooped the PMR Africa Excellence Awards 2017, for which it won a Diamond Arrow in the national survey of medium-sized pension fund administrators and consultants category. It was rated as excellent and best overall by a random sample of principal officers and trustees. Robson Savage delivers fully comprehensive administration of funds on a standalone or umbrella basis. Its clients have investments of around R20 billion in total. So, in effect, there’s absolutely no room for error, no room for anything at all that hints at laissez-faire. Pension fund administration is a huge responsibility – one which, here, is taken very seriously, and with aplomb and delight. All at the same time. Right now.

In a heartbeat.
